SAYS CHILDREN'S EARS ARE OFTEN NEGLECTED

Doctor Noyes of the School of Medicine of the University of Missouri Warns Parents.

"Of all the organs of special sense, the ears are the ones most neglected, even after their function has become notably impaired," said Dr. Guy L. Noyes, acting dean of the School of Medicine of the University of Missouri, when asked about the troubles of hearing.

Doctor Noyes says that ear diseases are responsible for many of the absences from school of young children.

"Repeated recurring attacks of ear trouble with great pain and discharge are looked upon by many parents as unavoidable misfortune to be dreaded but not to be considered as serious, even so far as the function of hearing is concerned," says Doctor Noyes. "The condition of chronic discharging ears is the cause of 40 per cent of all cases of abscess of the brain.

"It is well to remember that a 'running ear', acquired possibly by neglect during childhood, will prevent its possessor from obtaining first class life insurance in adult life. Every single attack of ear ache leaves its mark upon the ear tissues and reduces in greater or less degree the power of hearing. Earache should be looked upon as one of symptoms of a very serious ear disease. A running ear should always be treated by an ear specialist. Practically all the ear troubles noted in early school life may be controlled by prompt attention at the hands of an aurist. When deafness is so marked as to be detected easily by the unskilled observer, the opportunity to do the greatest good by treatment has gone. Repeated examinations, two or three in each school year, are necessary if the greatest good is to be achieved."

Doctor Noyes says that faulty habits of cleansing the ear canal may lead to disease of the ear.

"A moist cloth applied on the finger is the only object that one should put in his ear for the purpose of cleansing it," he says. "The custom of using ear spoons, hair pins, pens and other metallic objects in efforts to dislodge wax from the ear is a very dangerous one and has led to a very serious consequences. If the ears need cleaning further than can be accomplished by the means indicated above, a doctor should advise it or carry it out himself. A considerable quantity of loose wax is normally found in the ear canal and does no harm there."

Doctor Noyes gives these warnings concerning children know to have chronic discharging ears:

They should not be allowed to dive while bathing.

They should not blow their nose to the point of making their ears "pop."

They be taught to blow the nose in a loosely held handkerchief without pressing one side of the nose closed.

Mr. Mollenkamp, who is an expert swimmer, made three dives to the bottom of the mud hole before he located the boy. JOURNALISM TAUGHT TO M. U. FARMERS

Agricultural Students at University of Missouri Learn To Write Farm News.

The principles of scientific farming have been developed so rapidly in the last few years that there is now a special field in writing for men who are farmers. At the University of Missouri, many of the men who are studying agriculture are also taking a course in the School of Journalism, the aim of which is to enable the students to write farm news for the agricultural press of the country. The course is given by Charles G. Ross, Associate Professor of Journalism.

"The purpose of this course is not to make poor editors out of good farmers," says Mr. Ross, "but to teach good farmers how to write good English."

Mr. Ross says that there is a growing demand for men who are trained both in Journalism and Agriculture. A Missouri-Arkansas news letter sent out by the St. Louis bureau of the United Press, regularly uses articles that are written ready to use well written stories concerning the farm and the farmers. "Very few of the students who complete this course ever leave the farm for Journalism," says Mr. Ross. Many of them, however, find it profitable to write articles concerning their farm experience. A few of them have become editors. A. C. Page of Kansas City, a student of the College of Agriculture who completed this course, is now editor of the Orange Judd Farmer of Chicago.

Between fifty and sixty agricultural students take this Journalism course yearly.
